

Hip-hop beginner

Hip-hop started in New York in the 1960s, relying on the cultural and artistic creativity of a black community.

During the 1980s, mostly due to the fast development of communication services and voice recording techniques, hip-hop spread all over the world. The hip-hop style has lots of variants. It has many elements of break dance and electric boogie and it also incorporates some acrobatic moves of the leg. In Europe the name of this dance varies by districts: Street Dance, Video Dance, Lookin, Arm Style, etc. It does not have any written or unwritten rules, but is still a whole. Hip-hop is the real imperfect art. (Ted Giola)
